U.S. Forces Lose 26 During Ambush In Highlands Area

SAIGON (AP) - Almost 1,000 North Vietnamese regulars partly overran a South Vieta namese base camp today then were hurled back into the jungle with losses of at least 116 killed and many more reported wounded and dragged away.

Striking before dawn, two North Vietnamese battalions rushed toward the barbed wire and sandbagged bunkers and cut through one corner of the defense perimeter.

For more than an hour the fighting was savage. One South Vietnamese soldier had his wife and two children in his bunker: the wife was killed by a charging Red soldier who was then killed by the South Vietnamese trooper

The South Vietnamese said 15 of their force were killed, 30 were wounded and one was missing

A few hours earlier an American paratrooper force stumbled into a fortified ambush in the central highlands and suffered 26 dead and 49 wounded. The Americans reported only six of the enemy killed

The ground fighting intensified as Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara completed his five-day inspection tour of Viet-

A high U.S. source said he would not recommend sending all the 100,000 to 140,000 additional U.S. troops Gen. William Westmoreland reportedly asked for.

At a news conference before flying back to Washington, Mc-Namara said U.S. policy is still to "provide the troops our commanders think necessary." But he added: "What is necessary depends on the extent to which we are using the resources we COUNCIL agreed on June 26 have available to us.'

Something Better Than Nothing

None of the eight Republican congressmen backing a plan to cool down violence in Vietnam by degrees has anything to do with party leadership.

This gives them the option to speak freely. It gives other Republicans the option to kick the stuffing out of their proposal.

It also gives the general public a chance and this could be important—to assess their proposal with a niminum of partisan prejudice.

It is a plan to let the undeclared enemy in Vietnam respond to an invitation to de-escalate the war by following the example of the United States. This side would quit bombing targets in North Vietnam for 60 days. If North Vietnam then showed signs of easing up its military efforts, a series of similar withdrawal moves would be undertaken, until military violence had ended.

Both sides could save face. Both sides would be relieved of an open-ended commitment to beat the other side into surrender.

The ultimate outcome would be like the outcome in Korea, where the United States maintains a massive garrison on a standby basis, though there has been no overt military violence since Dwight D. Eisenhower carried out his 1952 presidential campaign promise to stop the fighting.

It is significant in 1967 that the Johnson administration is where the Truman administration was in 1952. The Truman administration knew the public was growing intolerant of a war that fighting men could not understand. It knew something needed to be done but did not know how to go about it.

The eight Republican congressmen have proposed a plan to end the most recent U.S. adventure into Asiatic power politics. It is something better than nothing, which is all that has been forthcoming from the Johnson administra-

The Johnson administration can think of nothing better than to promise to negotiate if its enemy makes the first move.

Kinetic Key Club

If some grateful beneficiary of the East Liverpool High School Key Club's periodic projects ever starts a contest to select the most appropriate word to describe the youths, we would submit "kinetic" — pertaining to motion — or "kindly."

Certainly the boys are always on the move; during the fall, winter and spring they hustle about in a multitude of school and community projects. This summer, they are beavering away at Patterson Field.

Here is an example of action in progress—the club is less for talking about what to do to improve things than for working at it. The city and the schools are fortunate in having such a group of energetic young leaders.

High Cost Of High Flying

The Federal Aviation Agency air traffic control center at Oberlin, responsible for the northeastern quarter of the nation — one of 21 centers throughout the country — has reported a dangerous shortage of manpower.

The center is under the new Department of Transportation, which includes FAA. Its manpower complaint raises an interesting point.

power complaint raises an interesting point.

A shortage exists because of a fund shortage, it has explained in a congressional hearing. It says economy has been put before safety.

This is a serious charge by people who bear responsibility for the safety of aviation in a key area.

It is likewise a serious problem when it is considered that the growth of civil, commercial and military aviation is taxing a safety-service facility that has no means of recovering the cost of its operation.

The cost of highway traffic control is borne by motorists, who pay for it in taxes on gasoline and license tags.

The cost of railroad traffic control is, of course, borne by the railroads, themselves, which have been taxed on all sides.

So far, the cost of aerial traffic control, has been taken out of the hides of general taxpayers, most of whom derive no direct benefit from airplanes and few of whom use airplanes for transportation.

It was a tough fight in the early days of autos to sequester enough revenue from their use to pay for the highways and traffic controls they needed.

It is beginning to look like a tough fight in aviation, too, because aviation started on the wrong foot as a ward of the federal government and never has stood on its own feet; i.e., flown on its own wings.

An Important Distinction

Sometime in the near future, Congress must come to grips with tax exemption for incomeyielding investments by churches and charitable organizations.

These organizations have been crowding into investment fields at the expense of taxpaying enterprise. But when objections are raised, the organizations claim they are religious and charitable in nature, therefore immune to taxation.

There can be easy agreement that religious and charitable works should be tax-immune for religious and charitable works — but nothing more. When they go into the investment business, their investments are no different from any other investments.

any other investments.

Those who are saying this are going to be slandered and libeled by spokesmen for the organizations they are criticizing. That is the way the game is played in a free society.

But there is an important distinction to be made between property used in the name of religion and charity and property used for profit-making investment in the mame of business enterprise. It doesn't matter who owns the enterprise. All that matters is the use to which it is being put by its owners and operators. If a church goes into business, it is a business enterprise.

If a church in Las Vegas, for example, owned a gambling casino, shouldn't the gambling 'take' be taxed the same as if the casino were owned by a syndicate of professional gamblers?

TRUMAN TWILL

Purely Personal

I think Queen Elizabeth is A-OK, but it jolts me because she wears chic clothes, with fashionably short skirts, instead of a broacaded gown and an ermine-trimmed cape as if she never had seen a real queen on television.

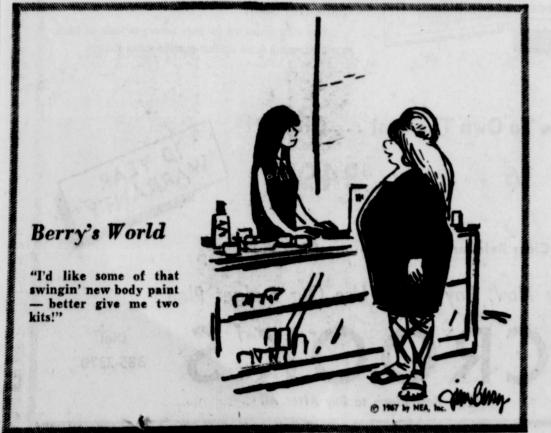

In a recent column, I said Oberlin was the only private Ohio college in a list of 67 heavily endowed institutions. That was correct, but the fact remains that Western Reserve University has an endowment of $75,933,215, which beats Oberlin more than $3 million.

Muhammad Ali, world's No. 1 heavyweight, could become the center of a religious issue if the appeal from his conviction for refusing induction into the armed services does not develop the fact his faith is as valid as any other faith whose followers are not pressed into military duty.

I have developed a fixation about the high cost of living. I say it is deceiving to think of it as a rise in prices when it is a systematic devaluation of our money, with dollars being milked of buying power so rapidly it soon will take five of them to buy a 35-cent lunch. It already takes more than one.

I hope someone in authority will have the grace and honesty sometime to point out that summer jobs have been made scarce by rules and regulations foisted on employers by the self-same knuckle-headed government now urging employers to give summer jobs to young persons.

You get to wondering what diplomats would blame for their failures if they didn't have the United Nations handy when they get spooked by their own stupidity and suplicity.

Move Over, Men!

Down The Rapids

By Art Buchwald

GRAND CANYON, Ariz.

I went down the rapids of the Colorado
River in the Grand Canyon with Sen. Robert Kennedy and his family and friends last week. There were 42 people in the party, including singer Andy Williams, mountain climber Jim Whittaker, pro football player George Plimpton, skier Willy Schaeffler, publisher Otis Chandler and 350 Kennedy children. I was the only one in con-

I was the only one in condition to make the trip, but in spite of this my father didn't want me to go. "It's all right for Kennedy to go down the rapids because he can walk on the water, but you're going to have to swim."

I assured him that the Kennedys would never do anything dangerous, but it was hard to persuade him. He said, "It's as sage to go down the Colorado River with Bobby Kennedy in a raft as it is to sail up the Nile with Gen. Moshe Dayan."

Despite my father's fears, I'm glad I went. You really don't get to know a man until you've taken a rapid with him. The trouble is, Bobby Kennedy took a lot of rapids, and he took them on an air mattress. Ethel, mother of 10, also took the rapids out of mother of 10, also took the rapids OUT of the raft, and of course her children took the rapids out of the raft, so there was nothing left for the rest of the party to do but leave the raft as well.

THE BEST WAY to take a rapid is to float feet first on your life preserver, just in case you hit a rock. But I invented a new way of doing it. If you keep your mouth open you can swallow most of the water you're going over, which makes it half as rough. My wife had to give me mouth-to-mouth resuscitation every night when we camped, but no one noticed it because everyone thought we were just kissing under the stars.

If you're ever going down the rapids with the Kennedy's, it's best to choose a river that isn't surrounded by cliffs. Every morning after breakfast Bobby would look up at a mountain and ask Mt. Everest climber Jim Whittaker, "Do you think it's tough to climb?" If Whittaker said no, Bobby would look at another mountain. "What about that one?" If Whittaker said, "It's impossible," Bobby would call the party together and say, "That's the one we're going up," and pretty soon Ethel, mother of 10, the Kennedy children and the rest of the group would be scrambling up the mountain in 110-degree heat

After the mountain had been conquered, everyone would return to the rafts to take some more rapids. By the third day I was starting to have a great deal of respect for my father, and I wouldn't take off my life preserver even to get into my sleeping bag.

PROBABLY THE most dangerous part of the trip was the last day, when we arrived at a place laughingly called Phantom Lodge, seven miles down, at the bottom of the Grand Canyon.

The only ways to get out of the canyon were to walk out in 119-degree heat, ride a burro out along the same trail or pretend you're going to die so they'll send a helicopter for you. I had rehearsed the death scene for three days, and by the time we arrived at Phantom Lodge I was barely breathing.

Bobby hoped to climb up the seven miles, as did the Kennedy children, and when Ethel, mother of 10, said she would climb out, too, the rest of the party were too embarrassed to say they'd rather go by helicopter.

Fearful that they would cancel the helicopter, I stopped breathing when Bobby and Jim Whittaker came up to me to see if they could persuade me to change my mind.

Bobby said, "Why don't you want to climb the mountain?"

I just smiled weakly and replied, "Because it's there."

Hard Line Eased On Red Crisis

By Bruce Boissat

Even as the Soviet Union rearms the Arabs and sends them military and political missions, critics of the Johnson administration blame U.S. policy in Vietnam for undercutting the so-called "detente" with Moscow.

Underlying their argument is the notion that a warmer, softer relationship with the Soviets was achieved for awhile by extraordinary displays of good will.

It could have been maintained, they say, by our not doing anything to anger Russia — like fighting in Vietnam.

Since things like the nuclear test ban treaty, reduced European tensions and a mood of continental prosperity are seen as the direct products of detente, the critics deem nothing to be of greater importance.

They are undisturbed that the Russians for their part do not offer the kind of good will the critics want us to display.

Soviet misbehavior in Arab lands is almost excused as an understandable response to our "falling from grace" in Vietnam. They insist that we, not Moscow, must take the soft initiatives.

History puts these notions in a curious light. The record indicates that the detente of which the critics speak grew not from newly yielding, generous attitudes by American leaders toward Russia, but from U.S. firmness in the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.

In his book, "The Atlantic Community," New York Times correspondent Drew Middleton writes:

"This was the great divide in East-West relations since the war... The relaxation of Soviet military pressure in the Caribbean was accompanied by a sensible relaxation of political pressure in Germany and West Berlin... In a shrunken nuclear world, a nation that backs down in one area backs down in all."

He adds that easing external Soviet pressure on Germany and other European areas was the "foremost cause" of the relaxed mood that allowed Europe to turn happily to its own inner concerns.

Historical support is immense for this argument but the missile crisis was of crucial pertinence in softening Moscow's pressure.

Memories of the time have quickly dimmed, but East-West tensions over Berlin were in fact worse in 1962 than at any time since the Berlin blockade ended in 1949.

The first nine months of 1962 were an anguished catalogue of Soviet ground and air harassments on the approaches to Berlin — all intended to loosen the West's grip on that city.

On July 13, Nikita Khrushchev flatly demanded that the West pull out for good.

On Oct. 9, exactly one week before President

Kennedy received his first hard information on Soviet missiles in Cuba, he spoke of the "great crisis" in Berlin. Sunday, Oct. 28, Khrushchev's decision to Sunday, Oct. 28, Khrushchev's decision to take out the missiles ended the perilous Cuban episode. The Soviet leader was a different man when he next spoke at a press conference. Said he:

"We do not want Berlin, we do not need it."
With the easing on Cuba, he said, there no longer was need of a "summit." It would be a good time, he added, to renew serious talks on a test ban treaty.

That was Nov. 7. Three weeks later, an official Soviet statement called for a Berlin settlement but said nothing about the Allies getting out. On Dec. 4, 1962, East German leader Walter Ulbricht soft-talked on Berlin.

From that time on, there have been no major, enduring harassments over Berlin. Moscow has not once indicated, since 1962, that Berlin is on its list of critical issues.

On July 25, 1965, the test ban pact was initiated. Other easings followed. The detente Present events in the Middle East show how fragile it was. History reveals how it was really born.

'68 Forecasts

Twelve months from now, Republicans will be holding a national convention to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

Everybody expects the Democrats to renominate President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey, but there isn't any consensus as to who their opponents will be.

Theoretically, the people do the choosing. In fact, under the outmoded and unrepresentative system of selecting delegates to a national convention, voters have no opportunity to express their will.

The party organizations — city, county and state — which are often controlled by small cliques, exert the dominant influence.

This doesn't mean public sentiment is ineffectual. Organization leaders want to choose the man they think has the best chance to win.

Discission in advance of the convention is confined largely to appraisals of the possible appeal a particular candidate might have on the voters.

PERSONALITIES mentioned most often nowadays for the Republican nomination are Gov. Romney, former Vice President Nixon, Gov. Rockefeller and Gov. Reagan.

Not one could be considered today as having enough support behind him in the Republican party to make sure of a majority of the convention.

The real question is how many delegates are likely to switch their allegiance when the balloting gets going.

There are many Romney and Reagan votes that could transfer to Nixon, or circumstances might arise in which some leaders who were staunch supporters of Nixon in the 1960 campaign would line up behind Romney or Reagan.

Gov. Rockefeller's opportunity could come if a deadlock developed between Nixon and Romney. The Rockefeller managers, however, would have to get behind a vice-presidential candidate — possibly Gov. Reagan — to make the ticket palatable to those Republicans who Barry Goldwater in 1964 was a kind of political feel the New York governor's failure to support treason which doesn't merit reward.

Debate among the delegates will be on this question: Who can defeat President Johnson?

Realistically, if the public is in a mood to eject the Democratic administration, it will not make much difference who the Republican Conversely, if the country doesn't want to see the Johnson regime ousted, it will not make much difference who is on the Republican ticket.

AGAIN AND AGAIN in political history, an administration in office may not have been popular and may have encountered considerable criticism, but the crucial factor at election time has been whether the nation should "change horses in midstream."

The answer in the coming contest depends on conditions as they will exist in November 1968, not what they happen to be in July 1967.

If the war in Vietnam hasn't been satisfactorily ended, the American people might not want to see a big shift in government and a period of several months of uncertainty initiated in November 1968 until a new president could become familiar with the status and background of problems facing the country.

Voters then might swallow their dissatisfaction and decide to let President Johnson continue to ride his horse across the troubled streams of governmental affairs.

The people may choose to record an adverse feeling about the administration's handling of the Vietnam War. On the other hand, there may be a peaceful ending and a constructive settlement by November 1968.

Shaw told Police Chief Bernard Zlatovich of Ohioville Borough he noticed Shields, who was in the middle of the pond, began acting strangely as if he were in trouble. Shaw told authorities the youth went under twice and then he drove in to help, but was unable to find the boy.

The youths then ran to a nearby home to summon aid. The water was muddy when police and fire departments reached the scene about 8:25 p. m. Fire departments answering the call were from Ohioville, South Beaver Township, Vanport and Brighton

A call was made for scuba divers and at least two responded. The body was located by Wally Whitton, according to Beaver County Coroner John Colavincenzo

The other diver was Walter Stoub. Both are members of the Beaver Valley Sharks, a scuba drivers club.

Whitten found the body at 9:20 p. m. in 15 feet of water about 25 feet from shore. The boy was pronounced dead at the scene at 9:25 p. m.

THE BODY was taken by Schwerha's ambulance from Midland to the Hazen - Wilson Funeral Home at Beaver.

Ten firemen from Ohioville responded with two trucks. Midland was summoned, but did not have to send its equipment after being informed it was not needed. Some of the firemen assisted in the search,

Planners Refer 2 More Reports To City's Council

Two more detailed reports covering subdivision regulations and transportation planning were referred to City Council Monday night during a threehour meeting of the City Planning Commission in Mayor George E. Willshaw's office at

Prepared by the consulting firm of Carroll V. Hill & Associates as part of the "master plan" study, the two reports were reviewed again by the commission before it took the action to pass them on to Council. The reports also had been reviewed at the time they were filed with the commission and then studied again by sub - com-

Most of last night's discussion centered on the proposed subdivision regulations. The transportation study includes a de tailed "major thoroughfare recommending ways in which the city might improve its traffic flow over a long span of years. The major recommendation is a so-called "circumferential route" around the outer edges of the city.

The planning concern was represented last night by Daniel Ziegler II of Pittsburgh.

When someone dents your fender and you need your insurance check now instead of weeks from now...

...the man from Nationwide is on your side.

We won't let cobwebs gather. We pay two out of three claims within 72 hours.

It's bad enough having an accident. On top of that, why should you have to wait weeks for your insurance check?

You shouldn't have to, says the man from Nationwide-and points to the Nationwide record.

Fifty percent of all Nationwide auto claims are paid within 24 hours after they are received. More than two-thirds are paid within 72 hours.

Nationwide may even hold a world speed record in paying an auto claim: 15 minutes.

(Our customer drove up to a Nationwide drive-in claims station, nudged the gate, and scraped his fender before the very eyes of the man from Nationwide.)

Remember these fast facts when you're renewing your auto insurance.

And when you talk to Nationwide about lower premiums and special discounts for careful drivers, you'll find the man from Nationwide is on your side there, too.

Sorehead Bird

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Miami Beach resiand 16th Street have been dents near Euclid Avenue beseiged for the past two weeks by a skydiving, headpecking mockingbird.

The bird spots his victim, sweeps down and hits from behind.

Most of the time, he flies down directly from the top of a building. But for sneak sorties, he's been known to roost in a 15foot palm tree.

The residents want to get rid of the bird and they insist that they're not just being soreheads but they're worried about what will happen if the bird attacks an elderly person with a weak heart.

KINCAID then added, "The reporter should have some personal discretion." He said he believes it is not just Council that should avoid personality discussions.

"That's for him, too," Kology said, gesturing in the reporter's direction.

Kology noted there has been a great deal of destructive criticism about the street department. He said the superintendent should work in each ward a week at a time, noting the procedure has been suggested by Councilman Thomas Bowen. Bishop, who had remained si-

Council then approved a motion by Kology to allow Bishop to take over the department.

You can see the holes in the street as well as we can," Kology said.

THE MEMBERS agreed Bishop will be allowed to make necessary minor purchases such as small amounts of blacktop for patching, after consulting with Donald Hood the city clerk, to determine if enough money is available. For larger expenditures, he will consult with the street committee and with the entire council if it is warranted.

Cashdollar said he sees no reason why the responsibility shouldn't be turned over to Bishop, noting the water department superintendent is in charge of his department.

Kincaid said he would make a public apology in the paper if he finds out Bishop's phone was out of order

McDevitt Resigns As Cage Coach At Wellsville High

Lowell Myers nounced the resignation of Jack McDevitt as head basketball coach Monday night at a meeting of the Wellsville Board of Education.

Will Teach At Oak Glen

McDevitt's resignation ended a 10-year reign as head basketball coach of the Tigers.

BECAUSE an operating levy was defeated this year, the Board of Education dropped football. Basketball remains a uestion mark depending on the outcome of the levy which is expected to be presented to voters again in November. McDevitt, a former athlete at

Newell High School and Fairmont State College, has accepted a position as art teacher at Oak Glen High School in the Hancock County school system. He is the second head coach to resign at Wellsville, Ken Woods, football coach, having accepted than her mother, but in this case I must. Stick to your natural color, Toots, and don't let anyone change your mind.

I'm a person who loves swimming, hiking, dancing and tennis. The thought of being married to a woman who could not participate in sports is very depressing. I am torn by guilt because she was injured in my car. Yet I don't want to be stuck with a crippled woman. Please tell me what to do.—ENTRE NOUS.

Dear Entre: Don't marry the girl. You have neither the maturity nor the compassion required to make the marriage work. You would feel martyred, cheated and trapped and she would soon know it. One day this girl right make a wonderful wife, but not for you.

She's Untinted

Dear Ann: I'm a 14-year-old with a problem mother. We moved to this city a couple of weeks ago and my mother all of a sudden wants to be very glamorous. She has dyed herhair a fake red and it looks terrible. Now she wants me to

A Junior Editors Quiz About -ROBINSON CRUSOE

QUESTION: What makes Robinson Crusoe such a famous story?

* ANSWER: The English author, Daniel Defoe, wrote his book about Robinson Crusoe in 1719. Defoe's Crusoe was an imaginary character, but the author had been inspired by the true adventures of Alexander Selkirk, who had lived on an uninhabited island for over four years. In Defoe's story, Crusoe is the only survivor of a shipwreck. Finding himself on a small, uninhabited island, he manages to save a number of articles from the wreck of the ship. What makes the book so fascinating, and so famous, is that it answers in great detail a question every reader asks himself: "How could a civilized man survive all alone under such conditions?" Crusoe builds a snug fort for himself, makes clothes and furniture as well as pottery, plants grain and generally lives as if he were king of his tiny cozy empire. Then, one day, he finds a single human footprint in the sand. He is thunderstruck-this means there are others on his island. But later, he saves a young native, whom he names Friday, and who becomes a trusted servant. After 28 years, Crusoe and Friday are finally
